NEW COURSES APPROVED FOR McGILL O.T.C.

Cavalry, Artillery and Medical Corps Sanctioned

FULL DETAILS

Outlines of Courses Announced by O.C.

At a well attended meeting of the Military Committee held yesterday, many important schemes of Medical Corps, Artillery and Cavalry Training, for adoption by the McGill O.T.C., were discussed and approved by Lt-Col. R. R. Thompson, M.C.

The course for the Medical Corps will be open to Medical Students of McGill University and shall consist of Infantry and Medical Corps training distributed over a period of two years. The object of this course is to train cadets up to the standard required for Lieutenant's certificates. A practical examination will be held in Squad and Platoon drill; Stretcher and Ambulance drill; Bandage and bandaging, applications of improved splints and map reading. First Aid training will be given right from the commencement, and at the conclusion of the course, about March 31st, of each year, cadets recommended by the officers in charge of Medical instruction, will be allowed to sit for these examinations.

The course in Artillery training—as well as the course in Cavalry training—will be open to all cadets who have been returned efficient at least once, and who have already applied for this training, subject to the limitation as to number. In future preference will be given to those in possession of infantry lieutenant's certificates.

The practical examination is divided into four parts, as follows:—(a) Command of a Section at gun drill and during ranging; (b) Standing gun drill; (c) Mechanism and Ammunition; (d) Horsemanship, fitting of harness and saddlery. Those receiving artillery training will attend four week-end excursions at the Royal Cavalry School, St. Johns, and they will also attend the ordinary course of lectures for infantry candidates. Those already in possession of infantry lieutenant's certificates may be excused by the C.O. unless he thinks that they need to have their memories refreshed. In addition they will receive special lectures, on artillery work, as arranged by the officer in charge of artillery. The number receiving artillery training is limited to 20 each session, and upon the conclusion of the course the selected cadets will be allowed to take the artillery examination.

The course in Cavalry Training will be open to those students who have the same qualifications as for the course in Artillery Training, and will

LEAGUE OF NATIONS TO BE DISCUSSED

Undergraduates Urged to Support Principles of League

Mr. John Bieler, Arts 1913, Law 1914, Assistant director of the Financial Section of the League of Nations, will address a special meeting of the combined Canadian Club, Literary and Debating Society, and Delta Sigma, on "The Operations of the League," at Convocation Hall, Royal Victoria College, Friday, Dec. 14th at 5 p.m.

The chair will be occupied by the Principal and upon the conclusion of the lecture, an open discussion will follow upon the following "That the Undergraduates of this University Support the Principles of the League of Nations."

The League of Nations has been the target of much criticism, due to its alleged inability to cope with many international problems which have arisen during its comparatively brief existence. Therefore, on account of the timeliness of the subject, a most interesting discussion is assured and a large number of undergraduates are expected to attend the meeting next Friday, Dec. 14th.

If you want a handsome and interesting souvenir of college days subscribe to the Annual and let them print an extra one for you.

BILLIARD CONTEST IS PROGRESSING

Draw for Third Round Already Announced

The draw for the third round of the Union Billiard Tournament was announced last night after the completion of the final game of the second round earlier in the afternoon. L. P. Little will meet R. H. Duval and E. Bouillon is matched against J. R. Robertson.

In the second round L. P. Little defeated B. C. Leech, 200-185, R. H. Duval won from H. G. Glickman, 200-196, and E. Bouillon won from P. Wickham, 200-123. J. R. Robertson drew a bye in the second round.

Yesterday afternoon's game was lacking in excitement due to the fact that Bouillon got away to an early lead which he increased during the course of the game.

The high run of the game was 24 scored by Bouillon who varied his shots considerably, displaying proficiency in all shots but being particularly outstanding in "losing hazards". The winners brilliant "follow" shots brought out the applause of the gallery on more than one occasion. Wickham contributed a neat fifteen, which made their game interesting for a few minutes.

There were ten runs of ten points made during the game Bouillon contributing seven of these; one 24, four 12's and two 11's. Wickham ran 15, 10 and 10.

Wm. Stein 3rd year Med., and H. J. Quinn, 1st year Arts, have a game yet unplayed in the first round of the Pool Tournament. Unless these players communicate with the Billiard Marker to-day they will forfeit the game.

Adaptability

There is much talk in this day and age about the value to man of a trait called "adaptability". The question of adaptability is almost an art. Yet it is an art that can be cultivated, and there are few better places to learn its fundamentals than in college.

Learning to adapt himself to new or unusual circumstances is one of the many useful things, aside from knowledge obtained from study, that a student gains from his college career. Adapting himself to the idea of a group may not seem easy at first. Fitting in wherever he goes, managing to make the best of things, may not be pleasant, but it is excellent training for the man who must later in life, outside of college, adapt himself to far more serious circumstances.

The student who does not learn this lesson of adaptability is often dissatisfied in college. The same will hold true in after life and he may be assured that he will never come out on top, unless he first learns to adjust himself to any and all conditions, no matter how trying. Penn State Collegian.

MANY HAVE SIGNED FOR THE ANNUAL

Subscription Forms in Hands of Class Presidents

EARLY PUBLICATION

Practically All Biographies and Junior Photos in

Subscription forms for the 1923 edition of the McGill Annual have been distributed to the various class presidents and already many signatures have been placed on them by students. The system of signing away a portion of the caution money that was employed last year is again being used this session. Three dollars and seventy-five cents is all that is required to make a student the proud possessor of the record of all the university activities for the current session. This is the same price as was charged last year.

In order that early publication of the volume may be assured it is not only necessary that all photos and biographies be in early, but also that the student body do not delay to sign the subscription lists. Particularly in the matter of subscriptions, the Business Manager of the Annual pointed out that only the number of copies actually signed for would be printed, so that anyone omitting to place his name on the lists now in possession of the class presidents, runs the risk of finding himself without an Annual.

Write ups on the activities of the different clubs and societies are to be prepared by the secretaries, and handed in with the least possible delay. It was emphasized by the Board that only with the cooperation of the entire student body can the success and early publication of the Annual be assured.

Students have come to realize, pointed out the Board, that a set of Annuals representing the years spent at the University is the best souvenir of college life that any man can possess. It gives a complete record of everything of importance that has happened during the year, so that besides being generally interesting, it is bound to prove of personal value to every student.

The latest reports from the advertising manager, G. A. Woolcombe, show that the advertising is proceeding well apace. The advertising department of the Volume is hot at work, and good results are already manifesting themselves. Several Juniors, not on the Board have declared themselves ready to assist in the publication of Old McGill by assisting in the securing of advertising matter.

TEA DANCE TO BE ENJOYABLE EVENT

Melody Will Fill Convocation Hall To-morrow

The Oracle predicts that one of the most interesting events of the week will be the R.V.C. The Damsant which is to take place tomorrow in the Convocation Hall.

Preparations are by this time well under way and the prospects are that it will surpass last year's teas which were so popular. The orchestra which will include a piano, mandolin and saxophone will add a great deal to the entertainment which will be of the very best.

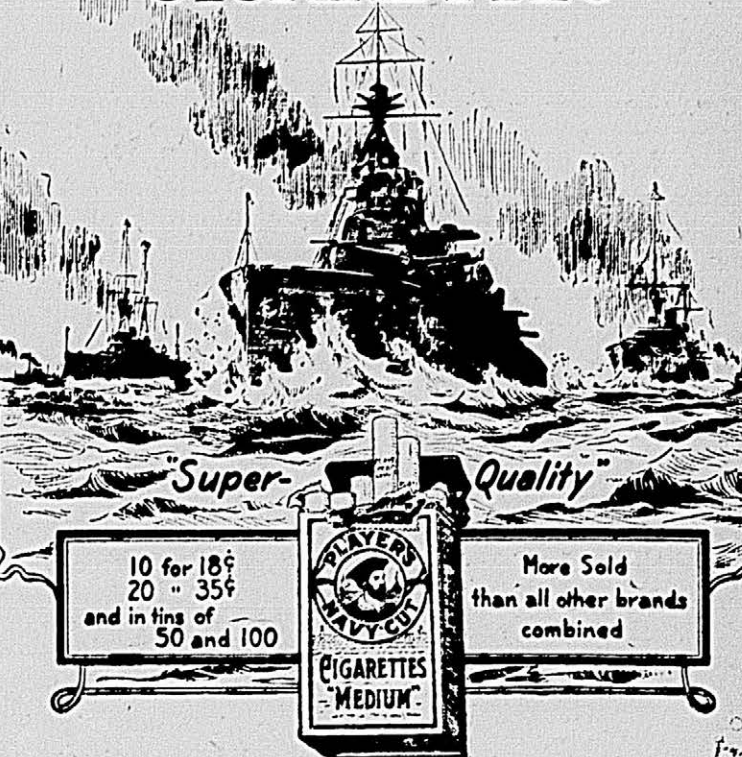

It is hoped that as many as possible will attend this damsant, and will show their appreciation of the efforts of the committee in charge, who have spared neither time nor trouble to make it a success. The proceeds are to be divided between two well deserving societies of the R.V.C. A few tickets are still available and may be purchased either at the Union or at Strathcona Hall for 75 cents.

More fish have been caught on fraternity pins than bent pins.

Yet, many a poor fish has been caught in permanent waves by means of hair nets.

This year's Annual is to be the best yet; make sure you get one. Sign along the dotted line and make sure you get an Annual.

THE THIEF OF TIME

To offset many of the advantages of a college education there is one serious habit of which unfortunately the student is an addict. He is perhaps the worst of offenders in the matter of "putting it off" and unless he manages to rid himself of the practice during his college days, is in great danger of carrying the habit through life.

In the class room the average student is fairly attentive to his professor, taking notes on important points of the subject, with the intention of looking into them immediately or at his earliest opportunity. But here his actions end and good intentions take its place. He is prone to think "Oh, I can do that quite well tomorrow" but when tomorrow comes apparently something else of greater importance is at hand.

Similarly with the weekly letter home. The paper is laid out but an invitation is received from the other boys to sit in at a game of bridge. When the game is over pipes are produced and another hour or two are "killed" in a discussion over the prospects of next year's football team or criticisms of the latest musical comedy. Then to bed with the letter unfinished.

Thus it goes on until the student is faced with an accumulation of work and he immediately becomes fed up. Had he but realized that there is no time like the present and had seen to it that each day's tasks were completed at the proper time much worry would have been eliminated. Therefore "Do it now."

CONDENSED COMMENT

The faculty boxing eliminations were started last night and some excellent bouts were witnessed. Coach Robinson stated yesterday that there is a very good beginners' class and was optimistic about the boxing situation. If the wrestlers go at the same rate as they did last year, the general outlook for the Assault at Arms, to be held here in February, should be only the brightest, with good chances that the intercollegiate honours will continue to rest at McGill.

Subscription lists for the Annual of the class of '25 are being circulated about the campus. In order to help the Board bring a difficult task to a quick and successful conclusion undergraduates are asked to sign immediately if they are desirous of obtaining this year's publication.

To-day's issue contains an important announcement regarding a combined meeting of three clubs at which the students of McGill will be asked to pass on a resolution dealing with the League of Nations. Full details will be published within the near future but between now and Friday, December 14th, we ask all undergraduates to give this subject serious consideration in order that they may deal with it intelligently and not in a haphazard and indefinite manner.

The concert by the Faculty of Music last night was of a high standard and was heartily enjoyed by a large audience. Among those in attendance, there were a good number of undergraduates and might we suggest that in the future all who can possibly attend these and similar functions do so. Too much cannot be done to encourage the love of the best music among the ranks of the student body.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT WAS BIG SUCCESS

Two Winners of Scholarships Render Solos

CONVOCAION HALL

Symphony Was Under Leadership of Dr. Perrin

The Faculty of Music gave their first orchestral concert last night in the R.V.C. Convocation Hall. In addition to the orchestra members, the program included vocal, piano, and violin solos.

The concert opened with the overture from Cherubini's opera "Medea," seldom, if ever, heard in public, but useful, as all in the orchestra have a chance to study scoring.

The next number was the Beethoven symphony in G major, op. 21. It is gratifying to think that a university orchestra is able to render the bigger classics, as Montreal is badly neglected in this line. At the first orchestral concert the ensemble playing is never quite so finished and acceptable as in the later ones, because the members have little chance of becoming acquainted with the work and routine of orchestral work. However, it can be frankly and honestly said, that the symphony was beautifully given under Dr. Perrin's able leadership. Perhaps the most successful and enjoyable movement was the Andante.

A pleasing contrast in the orchestral program was produced by the episode from Wagner's "Parsifal," the "Flower Maidens' Scene," and also the two Brahms Hungarian dances, in F minor and G minor. Besides the chief numbers, the orchestral accompaniment to "The Swimmer," from Elgar's "Sea Pictures," would be a test for any orchestra, and although now and then too loud, on the whole they assisted to emphasize Miss Mina McCree's skillful and musically rendering of this rarely heard composition, and the conservatory scholarship holder deservedly received hearty applause.

Another scholarship pupil, Miss Beulah Herhorn, in playing the Schumann "Arabesque" in C minor and a "Toccata" by Jones (first rendering in Montreal) shows great promise and control of her instrument.

It was delightful to see the well-known Science student, Mr. Edwin Sherrard, excelling not only in sports, but playing the Handel Sonata in A major for violin and piano, with musically insight and excellent style. The success of this number was due in no small measure to Miss Clara Lichtenstein, vice-director of the Conservatory, who was the pianist. Accompanying is one of the rarest talents and Miss Lichtenstein possesses its true secret.

Some of McGill's budding pugilists hooked up in the first round of the faculty eliminations that were held in the McGill Union last night. Action and willingness to mix it characterized the evening's entertainment. Some very promising material was discovered which bids fair for our chances in the Intercollegiate Championships that are to be held in Montreal on February 17th and 18th.

The first bout was between Christie and Montgomery, 135 lb. class, the former winning by a determined attack in the last round in which the latter was on the verge of a knockout. However he was game and managed to stick out the full period.

This bout was followed by a fast exhibition between Brierley and Wall, 145 lbs. both of Arts. This was won in handy fashion by Wall who forced the fight straight from the go and failed to follow up his advantage at critical moments.

The next bout was between Schleifer and Scarle of Arts in the 115 pound class. For the first minute both men sparred cautiously. Then Schleifer opened up and took the lead finishing the round with a hard right to the head. In the second and third rounds he maintained his advantage landing at will. Credit must be given to Scarle who fought a game fight although outclassed by his more experienced opponent and showed himself to be a comer. The bout between O'Brien and Taylor of Science in the 145 lb. class was a fight from start to finish, the contestants standing toe to toe throughout with very little attempt at guarding. O'Brien, landing the cleaner punches, was awarded the decision by a very narrow margin. Taylor showed that he would have to be reckoned with later in the season.

Mulligan who fought with Lister in the 125 lb. class Science, proved the surprise of the evening by snatching a decision from his heavy-hitting opponent after an extra round.

He gave a pretty exhibition of boxing, his ducking and countering being superb. The first round went to Lister while the third went to Mulligan, the second being even. Lister tired towards the last part of the extra round and at the end was taking punches without return.

R. B. MacLeod and Astwood in the 135 lb. class put up a fair exhibition with both men swinging wild. MacLeod gained the decision through his defensive work.

In three rounds of hard fighting J. W. MacLeod showed a marked superiority over Stone, a fighter of 20 mean ability. He absorbed a great deal of punishment and continually came back for more. This bout was in the 155 lb. class of Arts.

The only knockout of the evening occurred when Wilson floored Blundell with a short right to the jaw in the second round. Up to this point the fighting was close, Blundell having a slight edge on the exchanges.

Considering the high quality of the entertainment the turnout of spectators was poor. However, arrangements are being made to accommodate a capacity crowd when the next round of the eliminations will be held at Molson's Hall on Tuesday at 5 p.m.

The draw for Tuesday's bouts will be announced on Saturday. Coach Ernie Robinson handled the bouts in his characteristic manner. He is responsible in no small degree for turning out so many promising men in such a short space of time.

ORCHESTRAL CONCERT WAS BIG SUCCESS

The Andante from Bach's concerto for two violins, by the Misses Ethel Lamplough and Gertrude Niegheon, with string orchestra accompaniment, emphasized the right lines in every respect in which young students are developing their musicianship. Both young ladies played clearly and artistically. The program closed with "God Save the King" which was played by the full orchestra.

It seems quite possible, however, that Mr. Butler really has a higher opinion of these degenerate moderns than most of his remarks would indicate. At the end of his address he speaks of "having faith in youth" which sounds somewhat more friendly to the much maligned "younger generation." As for the great Victorians whom he praises so highly, it is foolish either to malign them promiscuously or to laud them to the skies. Since they were adjusted to a very different type of society, they would perhaps have been even less successful than the moderns in dealing with the problems of a complex and unstable world. A modern world may, given time, develop a set of men as great in their own way as were the eminent Victorians.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE IN MIDDLE AGES

Political Relations in Thirteenth Century

PROF. WAUGH

Delivers Second Lecture of Series

"Notre Dame de Paris and Westminster Abbey" was the subject of Professor Waugh's address before an attentive audience in Strathcona Hall yesterday afternoon.

Developing his theme to show the analogy it presents of the political relations between France and England during the thirteenth century, Professor Waugh succeeded to an unusual degree in captivating the attention of his audience by his clear enunciation and his method of imparting the study of history by the association of ideas.

The thirteenth century, said the speaker, was the greatest of the middle ages. It produced such outstanding men as Pope Innocent the Third, Francis Assisi, and St. Thomas Aquinas; and during that century chivalry yielded its finest fruit, and feudal warfare attained its most elaborate development.

France was the centre of civilization, and to it western Europe looked for guidance and inspiration, occupying as it did much the same position with regard to cultural development as Athens had achieved in ancient times. To it as the home of philosophy, religion and art, congregated the most learned men of that age. In that century, Europe's most famous universities had their inception, and to the University of Paris, many countries owed the knowledge which was disseminated to them by their envoys to that institution. St. Thomas Aquinas first became famous at the University of Paris, while Roger Bacon who was professor at Oxford had made his studies there.

There is no doubt, said the speaker, that France derived considerable prestige from this contribution to learning, and that it affected advantageously her foreign relations. "It is hard to think harshly of your Alma Mater," he said.

The end of the twelfth century saw the Norman type of architecture, characterized by its massive rounded style, superseded by the Gothic style, consisting largely in vaulted ceilings, delicate tracery in long pointed windows, and general lightness of design.

Notre Dame de Paris erected during first quarter of the thirteenth century in copying Notre Dame de Paris in the reconstruction of Westminster Abbey, was typical of the age, continued the speaker, and not to be construed as an act of allegiance to France. "True he was an admirer of that country, as the seat of Religion, Art and Learning" added Professor Waugh. "But to copy another country is no evidence of love for that country."

Westminster Abbey built under Edward the Confessor and rebuilt by Henry the Third is architecturally speaking, a French building. In its main outline though it shows English influence in the details.

During the twelfth century there was no feeling of nationality in France or England and the latter country may be said to have gained most in the one-sided intercourse between the two countries since France initiated the English people into European civilization. It was during King John's reign that we note the first sharp political division between the two countries.

The time was ripe for national spirit and animosities, yet while the barons relinquished their French property we can see no great evidence of patriotism in the authors of the Magna Charta when they invited Louis son of Philip Augustus of France to replace King John when the latter repudiated his pledge.

But England was gradually emancipating herself from French influence, and again we may see this trend of affairs in the contrast afforded by her cathedrals to those of France.

Notre Dame de Paris and the famous cathedrals of Rheims and Chartres, pictures of which were flashed upon a screen, were all wedged in by adjoining structures and consequently were made tall that light might be admitted, and the eastern facade alone was lavishly ornamented. The first English cathedrals were monastic property and as such were built in isolated spots; a practice which was maintained in subsequent constructions. Thus we find English churches treated equally well on all sides and built rather low but ornamented by lofty massive towers. The general effect is one of strength and restfulness.

Just as the need of individuality gradually led the English people to deviate somewhat from the Gothic style as perfected by France, there later arose prospects of subservience of Oxford University to the University of Paris which led to a great national awakening in England.

The danger then of the thirteenth century, concluded the speaker, was in the direction which might be

ARTS '25 WINS AT INDOOR BASEBALL

Defeated Med. '27, 10-7 at High School Gym.

Arts '25 defeated Med. '27 at indoor baseball by the score of 10 to 7 in a game played in the Montreal High School Gymnasium yesterday afternoon. The Medicine team was short-handed being without the service of their outfielders. With the exception of the third inning when the Arts men scored nine runs, the game was fast and well contested. In the third inning, however, the Medicine field loosened up, and the Arts men made their high count. Nine Arts players crossed the plate in this inning. Medicine attempted to stage a comeback in the fourth but succeeded in scoring only four runs. In the final stanza Medicine tallied twice in a short lived rally.

The battery work of both teams was good. Bronson, the Arts twirler held his opponents to one run for the first three innings, while Moffatt for Medicine blanked the Arts men for two innings.

The line ups follow:—

Arts '25	Catcher	Arts '25
Quackenbush	.....	Gardner
Moffatt	.....	Bronson
Post	.....	Ellison
Grassick	.....	Eadie
MacDermot	.....	Armstrong
Mulligan	.....	Miller
.....	.....	Rapp
.....	.....	Blundell
.....	.....	Stewart

The score by innings:
Med. '27 1 0 0 4 2 7

BOY PROBLEM SUBJECT OF DISCUSSION

Mr. L. R. Thompson Addressed Meeting.

OLD SCOUTS' CLUB

Rover Movement in England Brought up by Student

The Old Scouts Club held a very successful meeting in Strathcona Hall last night. The attendance was not up to expectations as the program of the evening was worthy of a much larger turnout.

The president, G. T. Lafleur, opened the meeting by calling on the secretary to read the minutes of the last meeting, he then introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. L. R. Thompson the Scoutmaster of the Sea Scouts of Montreal.

Mr. Thompson explained that his subject "The Problem of the Older Boy" would be put before his audience more in the form of questions, the answers to which, he would attempt to give in his own opinion.

In asking what is the problem of the older boy? the speaker stated that boys at the age of fifteen or sixteen have a tendency to stray from the interests around which they have been raised.

He compared the problem to the person going down to the shore with the intention of bathing at high tide and finding upon his arrival that the tide was out, the bather would not denounce the tide for its stupidity at being out, but would express surprise at himself for not being previously aware of the fact. At the same time it is not quite natural that a boy on the edge of manhood will be inclined, for instance, to wander off to indulge in some questionable Sabbath amusement rather than go to Sunday School. The boy will follow the line of least resistance, that which requires less thinking and which is undoubtedly attractive.

Although it is quite clear, said the speaker, that we cannot repay the debt which we owe our predecessors we can extinguish to some extent this obligation by working for the generation which will take our places tomorrow, it is the youth of the land on which we depend and we cannot over-estimate the importance of having our youth of the finest type. Who else is there to develop their characters but we of the present day? To demonstrate the importance of the position held by youth in the life of a nation. Mr. Thompson quoted figures which showed that forty per cent of the soldiers who fought for the North in the American civil war were youths under twenty-one. In conclusion the speaker said he thought it highly desirable that all our scoutmasters should be university trained men, for the older boy problem was one to be solved by men of intelligent leadership, but he would not advise anyone present to set his mind on becoming a Scoutmaster unless he had the real desire to do so.

Lafleur then expressed his thanks to Mr. Thompson for his kindness in coming to address the meeting and suggested that a discussion of the evening's subject follow.
